

Pronouns and Possessives

Pronouns are a simple matter in Sign. Merely point the index finger at whomever or whatever it is. It may be something physically present, or previously placed in space. Actually, the antecedent for a Sign pronoun need not be officially placed in space. If the conversation is about Sam, we can just point to the side without officially placing Sam there. Sam need not be present for the pronoun to work. The pointing could mean I, ME, YOU, HE, HIM, SHE, HER or IT. Sweep your index finger over the crowd to include THEY or THEM. Include yourself for we or us.

WE, US

Notice that Sign makes no distinction between we and us, me and I or they and them. Also, Sign pronouns make no distinction for gender. If gender is important, it must be stated apart from the pronoun.

YOUR, YOURS

The possessives are signed by moving the open palm, all fingers together, toward the person in possession of whatever it is. These possessives include MY, MINE, HIS, HER, HERS and ITS. Include a sweep of the group for THEIR and THEIRS. Include yourself for our.

MYSELF

Tap the chest with the thumb twice. Alternately, the hand shape may be rotated so the thumb pad faces the signer, knuckles tapping the chest.

YOURSELF

The thumb moves towards whomever self it is, whether it be HIMSELF, HERSELF, ITSELF or MYSELF. THEMSELVES includes a sweep of the group, thumb facing the group. OUR-SELVES ends the sweep of the group with myself, knuckles tapping the chest, thumb pad facing the signer.

The construction of Sign pronouns is straightforward. They can be placed before and/or after a statement. The DVD has many examples of these possibilities, but Sign pronouns most comfortably fit at the end of a statement.
